

Interior designer

AMY KLOSTERMAN

AB Design Elements

Klosterman placed an induction cooking surface on her kitchen island so that she and her husband could cook dinners together “with our kids and friends around us, not with our backs to them,” she says. A sculptural brass focal point on the wall above the shelves adds warmth. Similar to a decorative hood in its styling, the piece adds a strong visual statement to the wall. “I also love the asymmetry and simplicity of the light fixture as it is viewed against that brass piece.”

ERIK KRUK

STEPHANIE STUDER, LIFECREATED

Interior designer

CANDICE QUINN

London Pierce Design

Quinn combined elevated design with a serene, spalike atmosphere in this primary suite refresh. “The goal was to create a space that reflected my clients’ high taste and offered a calming retreat,” the designer explains. The centerpiece of the vanity area is Arabescato Corchia marble, selected for its striking veining, which serves as the centerpiece of the vanity. A teak floor, white oak cabinetry, a steam shower with aromatherapy and natural pebbles around the tub elevate the setting’s tranquility. “We bonded over our shared love for marble, and I incorporated it throughout for a balanced, luxurious feel,” Quinn adds.